“ Although I only have one picture of elroy, he has been more family to me than most of my real family. I looked up to him and he has taught me much in my life. He will forever have a spot in my heart and always hanging on my wall. Rest easy uncle elroy. You will be missed greatly.

“ Such a good man him and my dad (Rusty) used to ride out to my house drink coffee and visit for hours. Elroy up until he passed would come by the house about every month or two and visit drink coffee and just talk for hours.

“ I met Mr. Lopez while working in Jennings. He started off being so grouchy and gruff but after spending a few minutes with him, he became my new friend. I enjoyed our visits. I called him a few times to check on him and he always was so appreciative. Now he is pain free! My thoughts and prayers are with his family.

“ My father was a wonderful contradictory amazing pain in the butt man. He always had time for jokes, even if they were ones you probably shouldn't tell your daughter. He loved his motorcycles, fast cars, and women; in that order as well. He introduced me to boudin, beignets, and Cajun two stepping (which I regretfully still have three left feet). He looked a lot like Uncle Si according to my friends in New York. The best part of my trip every time I went to see him was when I was picked up from the airport. It gave us 2 hours of just us time together. We would chit chat the day away, always stopping in Scott Louisiana for Boudin balls. I enjoyed riding in the truck with him hauling equipment, irritating his co workers, and generally being the biggest pain in the butt I could be. He was a Vietnam Veteran, a dedicated friend, and will always be in my heart.

He always cheered my twin and I on for whatever accomplishments we were after. When I told him I was studying for an intense exam with an average of 15% pass rate he told me you can do it, you're dedicated, you're smart. When I passed on the first try he was even more ecstatic for me. It didn't matter what my goal was, losing weight, going after my dreams, paddling, hiking, college, etc. We sent pictures and videos and still it never seems to be enough when you live so far apart. Now after years of fighting cancer and pain Daddy has gained his wings and will forever be my angel. I'm going to miss you so much, and I hope you get to see the mountains you've missed seeing.

Much love,
Erin
