“ As the song goes, go rest high up on that mountain, for your work on earth is done. It is not for us to question why, instead we look forward to being able to see you again. Go catch up with your daddy, and all your other family who have gone before you. I can't recall just one memory. They are countless. i watched you grow, into the beautiful woman you are. R.I.P. my sweet niece. You will be missed.

“ Amy came into my life via Facebook when I needed her the most. I had just lost my youngest daughter in a horrific auto crash, and Amy just had a way about her which gave me strength. She was always so polite as I would go on and on about the pain I felt, gently reminding me that she was sure my daughter wouldn't want me to mourn so deeply. She reminded me that she firmly believed I would see my child again, and we'd never be separated again. Days turned into years, and Amy became My Amy! I grew to love her as much as anyone could possibly love another human, and oh the joy my heart felt the first time she called me her Momma J. There will never be another to take her place. As I wait now for the day to see my daughter, I also wait to see My Amy. God bless you Kyla and Bobby. May God keep you in his loving arms and send you strength from your dear sweet mom. Janice.
