“ Letter For Paw:

June 2nd. That's the day my pawpaw passed. Not just my pawpaw but my best friend. He was everything to me. I would go visit him and maw every Sunday after mass and sleep over and if anyone knows me it's that when I get into their house the first things I would do is hug maw and paw then go straight to the fridge to find food and if anyone knows my pawpaw and the way he jokes with me it's that if he seen me with food the first thing he would say is "you already eating or you eating again!!" He always made me laugh kept a smile on my face. He was there for me to talk to him about anything. And if anyone i know knows me the most or the best it's him. I can remember just going lay on his bed while he sat in his chair and he would listen to me rant abt anything and everything under the sun between talking about school, my future, and boys cuz for some reason every time I seen him he would always ask me if I had a boyfriend yet and when my dad would let me and for anyone who doesn't know my dad that is a BIG NO cuz my dads answer is not until I'm 40 😂. Ik he loved our conversations and ik he loved his others with other people. He cherished every moment with not just me but with his other grandkids, his wife, his kids and friends as well. He loved getting calls from his grandkids as well just to hear their voices and know that they cared to check on him. To call him a good man is such an understatement. He loved and cared about so many people. He showed it by helping out at the Mason Lodge, going to church with maw, spending time with his grandkids, kids and friends. I can't express how much I will miss him. Ik he is on his way to heaven and he will be in peace now. He will forever be in our hearts but we just have to keep in mind that he is in a better place now. I know i may be 15 right now but one piece of advice, don't let this take over you. Let it build you up to be better, i know if my pawpaw were able to speak right now he would tell me to not walk away from what's good for me and to keep continuing in my faith and to believe in myself that I can be better and he will always be by my side. I know he will be by y'all's.
